Book Developer & Editor

Join our highly collaborative firm—the country’s leading educational Judaica publisher. Become part of the team developing books, software, and other educational materials that engage and attract children in K-12 religious school classrooms throughout North America.

There are a half-dozen of us, professionals with over sixty years of experience in Judaic and secular publishing, at houses large and small. We’ve settled here because we like to develop, write, edit, art direct, design, and animate the highest quality—and most creative—educational materials. We are the market leader—almost every religious school uses our books and software. We are highly collaborative and have a passion for creating products that stimulate the imaginations and intellects of children. Visit our website at www.behrmanhouse.com and take a look at what we’ve published.

If you join our team, you’ll be able to:

- Influence and inspire the next generation of North American Jews.
- Work collaboratively with the best people in the field.
- Be engaged by intellectually challenging and creative projects, making your personal mark on everything you undertake. There are no cookie-cutter series or designs at our firm.
- Work directly with educators and children to help develop new product ideas, then bring those ideas to life.
- Develop the whole book. No passing things off to other departments, or inheriting a half-finished project—our editors are in charge from project conception until we go to the printer.
- Enjoy a modern workspace that fosters collaboration among colleagues but also allows for private space.
- Explore multi-media and computer-based learning tools, as our firm continues to expand beyond print-based education.
- Pursue professional development while learning with your colleagues as you attend, and conduct your own, peer-based continuing education sessions (we call them “salons”).

We want you to have writing and editing experience, a knowledge of Judaics, and an understanding of the classroom. How much experience, how much knowledge, and how much understanding? That depends on your combination of talents and your passion for our work.

We offer a professional yet informal environment in cheerful space in Springfield, NJ, just 15 miles outside of Manhattan. We provide competitive salary and benefits (health, 401(k), etc.)

If you think this might be the place for you, we want to hear from you. Just fax your resume with writing samples to 973-379-7280, or email it as a Word attachment to resumes@behrmanhouse.com. We can’t wait to hear from you.
